PALM SUNDAY: THE ENTRANCE OF CHRIST INTO JERUSALEM

The Lord who sits on a Cherubic throne in heaven and on a colt for us on earth, is now approaching His deliberate Passion, and today is hearing the children shouting "Hosanna" and the crowds crying out, "O Son of David, Blessed Jesus, we pray be quick to come and save us whom You made. For this is why You came to earth, so that we might know Your glory."

Our Mission: To proclaim and live the Orthodox Christian Faith in its fullness as faithful members of the Body of Christ

"FAITH. FAMILY. COMMUNITY."

Fasting protects children, chastens the young, makes seniors venerable....It restrains those in their prime...guards the married...If all were to take fasting as the counselor for their actions, nothing would prevent a profound peace from spreading throughout the entire world.

Saint Basil the Great, "Second Homily on Fasting" (4th c.)

My Beloved Co-Pilgrims on the Lenten Journey,

It's so confusing sometimes. Fasting, that is. There are so many rules, but ask anyone who truly understands it and they'll tell you it's not about rules. It seems to be centered on food, but experience and Holy Scripture (Matt. 15.11) tells us what comes out of our mouth is far more important than what we put into it. We do it all together as a community practice, but we are also told to keep our fasting secret so nobody sees it (Matt. 6.17-18). It's both required and voluntary. It's strict and it's flexible. It's about eating; no, it's about doing. Help!

We can say a few things for sure about fasting. It is a means, not an end. That is, it is something we use to get somewhere, it is not the destination itself. It is also a tool we are given to strengthen our spiritual life, it is not the essence of spiritual life itself, and certainly not a hammer with which to beat up ourselves or others. It is not an obligation to "give up" anything, but an opportunity to choose those things which benefit both our body and soul and avoid those which harm them. It is not a means of constraint, but an ultimate expression of freedom: "I will choose because I want to, not because I have to."

Is fasting burdensome? Tiring? Meaningless? Then it is not the fast offered by the Church in Her wisdom, but some other kind of isolated exercise that is not offering us complete conditioning. For example, if someone undertaking a fitness program does only one set of exercises, that part of the body will fatigue and the rest will not benefit. Likewise, fasting out of context can be detrimental both physically and spiritually. Father Alexander Elchaninov, an early 20th century Russian priest, put it this way when answering a question about why so many Orthodox Christians who fast are "bad-tempered" in the last days of Holy Week. He reminds us that fasting by itself is "a completely external, technical, subsidiary exercise," and responds, "If it is not accompanied by prayer and increased spiritual life, it merely leads to a heightened state of irritability." Sound familiar?

So, in the midst of the Great Fast which we are traversing, we are called to find ourselves, and in doing so, find Jesus Christ and His holy image in us. "Here is our task," says Father Alexander, "having renounced ourselves, to remain ourselves, to realize God's plan for us." And that plan includes the call to true fasting the Lord offered in the prophecy of Isaiah (58.6-9) when He challenges us: "Is not this the kind of fasting I have chosen: to loose the chains of injustice and untie the cords of the yoke, to set the oppressed free and break every yoke? Is it not to share your food with the hungry and to provide the poor wanderer with shelter—when you see the naked, to clothe them, and not to turn away from your own flesh and blood? Then your light will break forth like the dawn, and your healing will quickly appear; then your righteousness will go before you, and the glory of the Lord will be your rear guard. Then you will call, and the Lord will answer; you will cry for help, and he will say: Here am I."

There are many opportunities to respond to that call. Look through the flyers and the news. Immerse yourself in worship. Dive into prayer. Reach out your hands in mercy. Observe holy tradition and practice mercy. This is an acceptable fast to the Lord. Kalo Pascha!

In Christ,

LENTEN SERVICES & INFORMATION

Lenten and Holy Week Schedules of Services Mar/Apr

Make a family plan and circle the services you are able to attend and place them on your schedule and on your phone's calendar! As the hymn from the Book of Psalms tells us during the Great Compline service, "God is with us." Lent provides us a special time to be with Him. See you there!

GOYA Lenten Soup Sales Through April 2

The GOYA is once again offering its very popular Lenten soup and sauces sales during the Sundays of Lent. Among the many good reasons to buy some to take home are that they are strict Lenten recipes, they provide fund-raising support for our GOYA ministry ... plus they taste great and they are good for you! Please visit the Lenten Soup Sales table in Gallery during Coffee Hour each week! Thank you for supporting our youth as you strive to maintain and grow your spiritual discipline of fasting during Lent!

Lenten Resources Available on the Internet

Lenten Coffee Hour Reminder Through Pascha

Please keep in mind that throughout Lent our Coffee Hours following the Divine Liturgy observe the Orthodox Lenten fasting schedule. Anyone sponsoring a memorial coffee hour or providing Church School snacks is asked to take care that non-meat and non-dairy items are provided. The Philoptochos and the Church School can provide a list of suggestions for good alternatives. Thank you for helping our community grow in this proper and helpful Orthodox spiritual practice and discipline.

Holy Week Books Available

Please be sure to stop by our Three Hierarchs Orthodox Bookstore to pick up your copy of the Holy Week/Easter Service book from Patmos Press. This book contains all of the services for Holy Week and Easter in the original Greek text with the Modern English translation on opposing pages. MARCH 2017 – "THE VOICE OF HOLY TRINITY CHURCH"

Father John Androutsopoulos

Lent Comes Again

"Out of the depths I cry to Thee, O Lord! Lord, hear my voice. (Psalm 130/129:1-2)

Monday, February 27, is the beginning of the Great Lent, and we march through these days leading to the glorious, joyous, triumphant PASCHA, which is our Passover from sin to salvation, from darkness to light, from hatred to love. It is a day we call "Pure Monday"; on this day, the first day of the Great Fast, we begin our annual retreat. We detach ourselves from the distractions of the mundane routine of our daily life and concentrate on the life of the Spirit.

We do this with a goal or purpose in mind. During Great Lent we have the opportunity for personal communion with ourselves, with others, and with God. It is a spiritual pilgrimage which begins on the first day of Great Lent and ends at the Empty Tomb of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

A Time for Preparation

Lent is a season which has been observed throughout the ages by Christians of every land. From the beginning, Lent has been a time of preparation for Pascha. It has been a time for contemplating the meaning of suffering and death, the cost of discipleship, and the unimaginable price that has been paid to redeem the world.

A Time for Repentance

It can become for us a time of repentance, asking that God would forgive us wherein we have failed. It can be a time wherein we determine through His unending power and mercy to discipline ourselves more to His way and will, and to receive His love that we might fully love.

A Time for Fasting

Great Lent is a time for fasting and abstaining. It is a spiritual discipline that we desperately need. Fasting is vital in any spiritual renewal. Fasting must be carried out in true humility. We fast not only from certain foods but abstain from idle talk and gossip. We learn to be charitable towards others: prayer, fasting and almsgiving are the three attributes of Great Lent.

A Time for Confessing

Last but not least prepare yourself for the Sacrament of Holy Confession and receive Holy Communion frequently during Great Lent. With a set goal and high aspiration you will be ready to enter the Holy season of Great Lent prepared to reach a high level of spiritual renewal.

A Time for Almsgiving

Why give to the poor? Saint Paul says of the Lord, "He scatters abroad, he gives to the poor; His righteousness endures forever" (2 Corinthians 9:9). But do we do our part in this calling?

There are millions of the world's children who are hungry.

They live under unspeakable conditions of poverty, disease and ignorance. Hundreds of millions of adults do not get enough food to maintain minimum health. Many children weigh less than 60 percent of normal weight. Have we not seen malnutrition depicted on television? The bloated, wasted bodies of God's children cast divine judgment upon us and our civilization.

Christians should applaud the media for keeping the story of hunger before us. But what else must we do?

St. Paul, writing to Christians at Corinth, helps us with counsel we can apply to ourselves, to churches, to governments and to humanitarian agencies. God, Paul reminds us—scatters abroad and gives to the poor—and He asks us to follow His example. St. Paul is raising a collection to relieve the suffering of Jerusalem Christians. He reminds his readers that God has been lavish in his gifts: His righteousness endures forever. He is concerned with right relations. That is why we must respond by generous giving ... giving prompted by God's care. Such giving will bring us rich rewards: the presence in us of God's continuing grace and the ability to do even more to express his love.

A Prayer for Lent

Our Heavenly Father, Who have given abundantly to us, give us a repentant spirit for neglect of Your command to feed the hungry. Give us the will to do what each of us can do to feed the least of these. Amen.

One of the great blessings of Orthodoxy is the presence, prayers and inspired words of the Holy Elders of the Faith. They have been referred to as “precious vessels of the Holy Spirit.” In recent years, many books have been published in English with their writings and talks. This column provides an opportunity for each of us to be blessed by their words.

Elder Aimilianos

Gheronda, what is sin?

Sin was the blindness from which we suffered; it was that which separated us from God and prevented us from seeing even His back parts (cf. Ex 33.23). What, then, is the death of sin? Precisely this: the feeling that now we've begun to have rights in the life of God. We haven't had any rights so far. But now we do, because sin has died within us. But not because we've repented. Set your mind to repent, sit down and weep for your sins, and you'll see that, in the midst of all your tears, your mind will be thinking about something else.

In the same breath with which you ask God to forgive you, you'll be wishing for other things as well. The death of sin that occurs in true repentance is brought about only by the action of God. He alone brings forth the death of our sinfulness and the cessation of our passions. Go ahead and try to fight against your anger, against your rage, against your hate. Dig deep inside yourself and try to uproot even the smallest of your passions. You'll accomplish nothing on your own. Nothing! It is God alone who puts our sins to death and gives us new life.

How do we find freedom from sin and new life God?

As you're coming to church with the intention of struggling with your passions, you'll see that at some point you'll say: "Where's my anger? My rage? Where's my resentment? My jealousy? My anxiety? Where's that sorrow I was carrying? Where are my worries? My disappointments? Where's my bitterness?" All those things are passions and they have been put to death in the new life of the believer. The death of sin has been accomplished within us, and now repentance makes its appearance in our lives. Our relations with God have been smoothed out, and now we are able to approach Him with boldness. We discover that our sin is withdrawing from us, as are our passions, along with all the earthliness of our heart.

An earthly heart is a heart that has grown heavy and dense. Just as our body puts on weight and gets fat, so too can the heart become corpulent and fleshly (cf. Mt. 13.15). It becomes earth, flesh, dense with carnality. Now, however, you see your heart's fleshliness melting away, just as body fat melts away through fasting, so that the body becomes purified and spiritual. As a result, the heart loses its material aspect and is purified, prepared, and readied to receive God.

This process of transformation is the spiritualization of our being, a movement which coincides with the entry of the divine into our lives, the advent of divine energy acting within us. That energy had always been present, but was not active. Now, however, the desire for God is born within us: it begins to kindle and soon bursts into flame. The eyes of our senses begin to open; the eyes of our souls, the eyes of our body. Upon what do these eyes open? What do they see?

Why does that divine flame not happen to me, Gheronda?

Most most people go to church, present themselves to Christ, and leave without ever drawing out any of His strength, without experiencing his power, the way the woman with the flow of blood did (Mt. 9.20). And then they say: "So what did I get from Christ? I came back from church the same person I was when I went." But we feel a certain sweet pleasure, a feeling of delight. Now nothing is lacking. On the one hand there's God, Who sweetens your life and gladdens your youthful soul, which is always rejuvenated when you stand in His presence. On the other hand, your heart is gladdened, and your soul says: I shall dwell here, for I have chosen it (Ps. 131.14).

If someone truly longs for these holy feelings and experiences, how can he not receive them? How can God not respond? This is why God has established this liturgical assembly. This is why He arranges for angels, archangels, and saints to be present here with sinners, so that each can give something to the other. The saints are here so that they can give their saintliness to the sinners. And sinners are here to convey to the saints their desire for their holiness, so that they, too, may be found in their company. We find all of this within the church, provided that all is still and silent within us, and that our inner gaze remains fixed solely on the drama unfolding before us.

When we come to church, what are we looking for? Fish in the desert? No. We are looking for that hidden, "inward meditation" of the heart which unites us to Christ. If we want to be healed, if we want medicine to enter our body, we have to accept an injection in our arm or somewhere else. In order to receive sap, a branch has to be grafted on to another tree. You have to graft a wild olive branch onto a cultivated tree if you want the bitter to become sweet (Rom. 11.17-21). The same thing happens here in the church, where you are mystically and sacramentally united with Christ in and through your inner meditation on these things, they will become a reality. When we come to church filled with longing, when we celebrate liturgies and vigils, what are we looking for? Christ! In order to find Him, strive to enter into that hidden, inner meditation and you'll see that He'll come of His own accord. You'll see the heavy stone roll away from your heart and He Himself will rise!

What are we looking for? A universal state of being within the Church; an inward state of being, "conferred by Jesus." Experiences, feelings, longings, and visions: it would be unfitting to say that these are anything other than a state of being created by Jesus Christ; a state of being which is realized and fulfilled only by His presence, and which, without Him, disappears at once. My beloved children, behold that which is here; nothing else. Whatever you see has been established and conferred by Jesus.

Talking Less—Acting More—Witnessing Love

The sinful woman, upon hearing that the Savior was in the house of Simon, came there with an alabaster box of ointment. Standing behind the Lord, by His feet, she began to weep and washed His feet with her tears, then wiped them with her hair, kissed them, and anointed them with myrrh (Luke 7.36-39).

She did not say anything; she only acted, and through her actions revealed a most tender love for the Lord. Because of this it was spoken of her: Her sins, which are many, are forgiven, for she loved much (Luke 7.47).

Oh, when will we talk less and act more, and through our actions witness our love for the Lord? You might say, “If He were here I would be ready now to do everything for Him.” But He is here, invisible in His person, but visible in all Christians, most of all in the needy. Anoint the invisible Lord with loving prayer of the heart and mind, and for His sake do everything possible for the needy, and you will be doing this for God.
